“Let’s Clean the World”

Once upon a time Quad, a tiger, fell from a boat he was sailing and surprisingly found himself in the lost city of Atlantis. Atlantis had a big plastics problem. There were so many plastics surrounding it that nobody was able to walk through the streets nor to have a normal sea-life.

Quad went to the palace to speak to the King. He stretched, then he thought for a while and decided to fight against that horrible problem because he didn’t like how people lived there. The King was in favor of his decision but how could they fight against humanity? How could they fight against all the people on Earth who kept throwing all their junk in the sea?

Quad had an idea. He would ask the people in Atlantis to help him knit five big, enormous webs with the plastics the humans had thrown upon them. They spent days and nights doing them until they had an enormous web, thousands of kilometers long.

Once it was finished, the people from Atlantis asked some dolphins to help them throw the net upon the different continents. Humans realized in that way that what they were doing was horrible. They had been kept prisoners by the same plastic they were using to imprison the poor sea creatures.
